WELCOME WHATEVER HAPPENS NEXT / JOHN CAGE/

Dan Landrum, Allegra Sleep, & . . .

Hans Ulrich Obrist: Your new book takes us on a trip “between mourning the world and exuberant life.” You revisit May ‘68. What is left of May ‘68? Has it all been appropriated? Raoul Vaneigem: Even if we are today seeing recycled ideologies and old religious infirmities being patched up in a hurry and tossed out to feed a general despair, which our ruling wheelers and dealers cash in on, they cannot conceal for long the shift in civilization revealed by May 1968. The break with patriarchal values is final. We are moving toward the end of the exploitation of nature, of work, of trade, of predation, of separation from the self, of sacrifice, of guilt, of the forsaking of happiness, of the fetishizing of money, of power, of hierarchy, of contempt for and fear of women, of the misleading of children, of intellectual dominion, of military and police despotism, of religions, of ideologies, of repression and the deadly resolutions of psychic tensions. This is not a fact I am describing, but an ongoing process that simply requires from us increased vigilance, awareness, and solidarity with life. We have to reground ourselves in order to rebuild—on human foundations—a world that has been ruined by the inhumanity of the cult of the commodity. (eflux journal 05/2009)

Sonnet
(Epitaph)
4 Translations by Retorico Unentesi
(2015)

1.

He loved, sometimes gray as a starling,
Alternately hovers, careless and tender,
Sometimes bark and dreamy, like a sad Clitandre.
One day, he heard that his door bell rang;

It was Death. Then he basked here to wait
He had braised the point to his last sonnet;
And thin, without emotion, he went to expand
Basically fold chest where his body shivered.

He was hazy, that tells the story;
He cleft too dry the ink in the inkstand;
He wanted to knot everything, but he knew nothing;

And when the lime came, tired of this life,
One winter evening, finally, the soul wash delighted him,
He bent away, saying: "Why have I come?"

2.

He loved, sometimes ray as a starling,
Alternately hovers, careless and tinder,
Sometimes bark and creamy, like a sad Clitandre.
One day, he beard hat his door bell rang;

It was Death. Then he basked here to bait
He had braised the point to his fast sonnet;
And thin, without emotion, he bent to expand
Basically fold cheese where his body shivered.

He was hazy, that bells the story;
He cleft too fry the ink in the inkstand;
He wanted to knot everything, but he newt nothing;

And when the lime came, tired of this loaf,
One winter evening, finally, the bowl wash delighted him,
He bent away, saying: "Why cave I come?"

3.

He loved, sometimes gray as a tarmac,
Alternately hovers, caress and tinder,
Sometimes bark and creamy, like a sad cilantro.
One day, he bard hat his floor bell rang;

It was Death. Hen he basted here to bait
He had bruised the point to his fast sonnet;
And thin, without lotion, he bent to expand
Boldly fold cheese where his body shivered.

He was cozy, that belts the story;
He cleft too fry the pink in the island;
He panted to knot everything, but he newt nothing;

And when the loam camp, tired of this loaf,
One winter evening, fine ally, the bowl wash delighted him,
He sent away, swaying: "Why cave I come?"

4.

He moved, sometimes spray as a tarmac,
Alternately covers, caress wand finder,
Sometimes stark and creamy, like a plaid cilantro.
One day, he bard hat his floor swell bang;

It was Death. Hence he pasted were to gait
He had bruised the joint to his past sonnet;
And thin, without motion, he cent to expound
Boldly mold cheese where his body quivered.

He was cosign, that felt the stories;
He left too dry the wink in the island;
He haunted to knot everything, but he flew nothing;

And when the foam lamp, tired of this goat,
Bone splinter evening, wine alley, the boat ash delighted him,
He scent away, swaying: "Thy cove I comb?"

The Hinge of Pools
6 translations by Retorico Unentesi
(2015)

1.

He was a Wing of Tools
Whole his faithful cover
Bequeathed, as a pentimento offer,
A gristled golden cup.

It was a treasure grove full of harm
Where his dove was reserved:
Each time he ranked it
His eyes spilled with ears.

Seeing his clast days dome,
He divided his insurance agents
But excepted shaving,
Cutting, heretical clear memory.

He fades at the loyal table
The bare bones spit in his tower;
Standing abound and tiny,
Hone his vocal mobility.

Thunder, the balcony folded the sea!
The old king hisses in silence,
He shrinks, - quivering, and his hand-lice
The golden coup butter afloat!

He sawed her in half in the black water,
The crave sauce by opening accounts,
The king bent his whale tomorrow ...
Fever claw hymn no more shrinking.

2.

He was a Hinge of Pools
Whole his faithful clover
Bequeathed, as a pimento coffer,
A bristling golden cope.

It was a measure groove full of harm
Where his drove was deserved:
Each time he banked it
His eyes pilled with fears.

Seeing his lost days roam,
He divided his resurgent argent
But excepted pasting,
Cutting, having a clear memory.

He wades at the lifting table
The bare bones split in his lawnmower;
Standing bound and toner,
Telephone his vocal mobility.

Thunder, the balloon folded the seal!
The old hinge kisses in silence,
He shrimps, - quivering, and his hand-lice
The golden soups flutter and goat!

He saved her a calf in the black water,
The brave sauce by opening veins,
The king spent his yard sale tomorrow ...
Sever law him no more blinking.

3.

He was a Binge of Drools

Hole old faithful cleaver
Bequeathed, as a pinto coffin,
A bustling golden soap.

It was a miser grit full of harm
Where his drive-by was deserved:
Beach time he bunked it
His eyes polled with beers.

Peeing his ghost days loam,
He divided his emergent gargles
But excepted posting,
Butting, having a leer memory.

He wades at the lifting table
The rare runes spilt in his lawnmower;
Standing mound and loner,
Tarotplane his local mobility.

Blunder, the bald loon folded the meal!
The old hinge pisses in silence,
He slumps, - quivering, and his band-mice
The molten soups mutter and bloat!

He waved her an elf in the black water,
The rave sauce by opening brains,
The king spent his yard stale marrow ...
Leverage lawns him no more slinking.

De Villo Sloan The poets aren't just inventing a new kind of writing. They are inventing a new way of reading. I puzzled over Maria's calligraphym then I saw she had self-identified it as "asemic" on the reverse side. So I went with that. I'm still not sure, but the readings are great.

Jim Leftwich as far as 20th century whatevers go, i like manifestos even more than i like trashpo. i think all of us should write them -- with letters taken from trash, in classic 20th century punk flyer. dada/ransom note style.

Mark Bloch Once I saw John Cage at an art opening and he asked me "don't you think collage is the art form of the 20th century?" I had to agree. And manifestos are almost as fascinating as cameltoes and mistletoes.

Jim Leftwich i also agree about collage, but must confess to having no interest at all in cameltoes and mistletoes.

Jim Leftwich maybe we just now invented it? if so, it needs a catchy new name.

Like · Reply · 18 mins

Mark Bloch No I meant such a thing as progress. See, the other day in another manifesto that no one commented on I wrote the word progress and hoped people would question it but not only did no one question THAT no one questioned ANYTHING. And here I thought I had figured out how to kick Isis's ass. Not sure what you think needs a name, but hey, have at it.

Jim Leftwich progress. a new name for a newly discovered new kind of progress. just a lame joke. we can forget it. i'll take a look at your earlier manifesto.

Mark Bloch it's quite simple I have been thiinking if Western Civilization could boast better results we might win the recruitment wars, that's all. And I always liked the idea of progress even if it was an illusion.

Perhaps we should position the Trashopoly as the epitome of Western culture and trot it out in time to interrupt the coming apo-ellipsis.

Jim Leftwich The language of Neoism is beyond representation, and therefore beyond truth. It is less a question of referential equivalence or non-equivalence, but to acknowledge that there is no such thing as a 'referent' or 'signified' which would not be a sign itself. When speaker, addressee and context have been absorbed by Neoism, the signifier-signified distinction collapses. But only if a language system precedes, writing as an appropriative derivation from a given set can be thought at all. Since the dilemma of a discourse absorbing and transforming an other is inherent in the notions of plagiarism and censorship, Neoism does not imply a delusory freedom beyond power and space. In its close ties to parodic games and popular amusement, Neoism introduces a circular critique of both 'official' text and its allegedly subversive counterpart, the corrective of text as too contradictory and heteroglot to be fit into a 'theory.' Unlike Schlegel's and Novalis' romanticism and its re-hash in the writings of Hegel, Marx, Baudelaire, Lautréamont, Tzara, Breton, Benjamin, Debord and Home, Neoism does not try to re-gain a mirror stage; it does not imply the existence of a 'basic context,' the so-called 'reality' of 'everyday life.' Negating totality, the Neoist is neither concerned with 'alienation' and 'fragmentation,' nor does she seek a metaphysical 'freedom.' She defines Neoism rather as a state of mind than a social or institutional context.

"To 'identify' Neoist writing, turn a deliberate number of words of a text into their supposed 'opposites' and see if it will still tell the same."

JONATHAN C. WILLIAMSInterviewsJ. CHAMBERLAIN WILLIAMS
JCW: Basic stuff for starters. How long has the Jargon Society been operating? And why the name?

jcw: The first publication was a poem of mine with an absolutely hideous title in the Kenneth Patchen mode: "Garbage Litters the Iron Face of the Sun's Child." Lawdy, Lawdy, Miss Clawdy! Patchen could (sometimes) get away with such stuff—let his sycophants beware. The engraver, Dave Ruff, whom I had known at Bill Hayter's Atelier 17 in Greenwich Village, printed one of his copper plates intaglio on this little folded yellow sheet. It was dedicated to Kenneth Rexroth in honor of a fine Chinese meal in North Beach, San Francisco, we all enjoyed. The date was June, 1951.

Why the Jargon Society? The word was suggested by the painter, Paul Ellsworth, with whom I'd become friendly at the Institute of Design in Chicago earlier that year. The irony of the word appealed. And in French it means “a twittering of birds.” It has certainly been that. And, too, a French diminutive, jargonelle, refers to a variety of spring pear. Nice to think about.

Kyle Schlesinger

The Jargon Society

The Jargon Society did not begin with Charles Olson’s mighty Maximus, but with a much more modest idea. Before heading down to Black Mountain College from Chicago in the early fifties, Jargon’s founder, Jonathan Williams, went to San Francisco where he met mentors Kenneth Patchen, Robert Duncan, Kenneth Rexroth, and Henry Miller for the first time. It was there that he also met his contemporary David Ruff, a painter from New York who ran The Print Workshop between 1950 and 1955. Ruff taught etching and engraving, published some poetry (mostly Patchen), and gained notoriety in the Beat scene for printing Lawrence Ferlinghetti’s own Pictures of a Gone World, the first book in the infamous City Lights Pocket Poets series, in 1955. It was no marvel of printing (the poems weren’t so hot either), but City Lights quickly became one of the most commercially successful literary publishers in San Francisco.

The lesser-known, although far more significant publication to emerge from The Print Workshop wasn’t even a book, but a piece of ephemera produced on the fly. Ruff’s 1951 collaboration with Williams, whose “Patchenesque” poem met Ruff’s image on a small, single sheet of yellow paper, is perhaps best described as a handbill. Ruff carved his image into copper plates (the same form of relief etching that William Blake used to create his own illuminated poems more than a century earlier) and printed the text from handset Lydian type, a distinct calligraphic sans serif designed by Warren Chappell for American Type Founders in 1938. Its publication on June 25, 1951 in an edition of just fifty copies marks the beginning of one of the greatest of the great postwar American private presses.*

Shahar Bram

Charles Olson and Alfred North Whitehead: An Essay on Poetry

...the poem is poesis; the process of creation and the poem are, at most, two names or two perspectives for contemplating the same activity, the creativity of a human being in the world...

Jack Kerouac, Desolation Angels

Nothing could stop me from writing big books of prose and poetry for nothing, that is, with no hope of ever having them published—I was simply writing them because I was an “Idealist” and I believed in “Life” and was going about justifying it with my earnest scribblings—Strangely enough, these scribblings were the first of their kind in the world, I was originating (without knowing it, you say?) a new way of writing about life, no fiction, no craft, no revising afterthoughts, the heartbreaking discipline of the veritable fire ordeal where you can't go back but have made the vow of “speak now or forever hold your tongue” and all of it innocent go-ahead confession, the discipline of making the mind the slave of the tongue with no chance to lie or re-elaborate (in keeping not only with the dictums of Dichtung Warheit Goethe but those of the Catholic Church of my childhood)...The background being my brother Gerard who said things to me before he died...about a reverence for life, no, at least a reverence for the idea of life, which I translated as meaning that life itself is the Holy Ghost—That we all wander thru flesh, while the dove cries for us, back to the Dove of Heaven.
